will pull it. If you people expect to ride on that thing you've got to fix it with the conductor. I can't promise you nothin' as the company don't allow the local to carry passengers."

"Where will we find the conductor?" said the Colonel.

"Over to his boardin' house of course. I'm a goin' over to call 'im now and if you want to see 'im, why come along," and picking up his lantern Tom led the way across the street where a light was burning in front of the door.

"Come right along up stairs, Colonel," said Tom, "you needn't be afraid; you ain't a goin' to git hurt."

Waiting for no further invitation they followed the caller up a flight of stairs and into a room where there were a half a dozen beds all standing in a row and all occupied, while jumpers, overalls, hats, caps and wearing apparel of all kinds were scattered around the room in dire confusion, establishing the fact beyond a doubt that the room was occupied by railroad men.

Walking over to the furthest bed, Tom gathered up the bed clothes and unceremoniously threw them on the floor.

"Now then, launch, come out of there," he called to the occupant of the bed, "before I throw you out. Shorty's been ordered out—sixty-five and the order is for you to git up an' feller. Long Jim is agoin' to pull, broad gauge is to make the power. Sandy and Top Knot are agoin' to twist the rods an' you're to do the fignin', so git up an' git a curve on yourself."

The only answer to this was a smothered yawn and a matter like, "Ow, go on and let me alone."

"No I don't do nothing of the kind. What's the matter with you?" and it was easy to see that Tom's temper was rising rapidly. "If I was to go on you'd sleep here till the judgment day and then where'd I be? No sir, your name's down as Bill Stevens and you've got to git up or I break you in two. They sent me in here to wake you up and I'm agoin' to do it or break your neck."

Here the man addressed rolled over and appeared to be fixing to go to sleep again.

"Did you ever see such ducks?" said Tom in deep disgust turning to the Colonel, "here I have to come up here and beat 'em put near to death before I can git any of them up and that's all the thanks I git fur it. Railroad men air the hardest to wake up of any critters that ever walked and I don't see how it is either." Here he spit on his hand and catching hold of the man in the bed by an arm and a leg he dragged him out on the floor.

"Now then air you woke up, Bill Stevens? If you ain't I kin put you through a specul course of treatment."

Mr. Stevens still showing no signs of being completely awake old Tom proceeded to drag him over to the wash stand and pour cold water over him, after which he stood him on his head and jammed him up against the wall several times with violence enough to shake the whole house.

Mr. Stevens was by this time sufficiently awake to stand up and swear and even make an effort towards dressing. During all this time the other occupants of the room showed no indication of having been disturbed by the uproar, but slumbered on like so many dead men.

"Railroad men beat all creation when it comes to sleepin'," said old Tom.

Correspondence.

Moulton Institute.

EDITOR GAZETTE: Not much news this week. Still dry and dusty. Water drying up in the tanks and pools; some wells failing, but don't be uneasy, it will rain some time.

We are expecting in the near future to hear of some young men in our midst of having business with the county clerk.

Messrs. Cooper and Uncle McKay are still absent, but guess they will be home this week. We are expecting some dried fish when they get back.

The negroes on Peach creek keep on using their little guns. Another one was killed last Saturday night. The murderer is said to be an escaped convict. Constable Taylor of Waelder brought him in from San Antonio where he was arrested by the conductor on whose train he went there on.

Health of our section still remains good.

A little daughter at Mr. Will Hull's, only a few days old. Mother and babe doing well.

Uncle Jake Hull went to the Primitive association last Thursday up in Williamson county.

Mr. J. D. McKay arrived back to this section last Friday. He came from Cisco and reports hard times in that section of country.

School at the Institute moving on nicely about 80 scholars in attendance.

Mr. Clark is putting up a new residence at the Institute. His two daughters arrived home from Kansas a few days ago, where they had been over one year. One of our young men heard when they were coming, and could not wait for them to get to Moulton, but went to Flstonia and came down on the train with them to Moulton. He will have business at Hallettsville before long, so the rumor goes.

No more till next time.

RAMBLER.

Moulton Institute.—No. 2.

MOULTON INST. October 8th.

EDITOR GAZETTE: Well here we come again with the same old cry: "dry weather." It is so dry one can hardly keep ink to write with.

The farmers are all through gathering now and preparing their land for another year so as to raise more of that 7 cent cotton.

School opened on the 2nd with a full attendance. Mr. John Crouch principal; James Murphy, assistant. The girls all like Mr. Murphy but say he is too bashful.

Misses Ada and Kennie Clark returned Tuesday from Kansas where they have been for the past year.

We hear that Moulton's gunsmith met with a sad accident yesterday (Saturday). While making some repairs on a gun it was discharged and the ball struck him in the thigh.

We hear that Mr. Joe Cooper has returned from a trip to the far west—all the way out to Slayden.

We hear that Messrs. Parker and Tannenberg have found the place at last at Hempstead. They have made their fortune but oh, dear! they have got to count the ties home.

Prayer meeting last night and a good number resolved to do better.

Mr. Jim Gardner is visiting Mr. Thomas Clark of the Institute.

Mr. George Mathus is visiting at Cherry's.

Church next Sunday at the M. E. church by Rev. Kilgough.

We see some of Shiner's young people driving the principal streets of Old Moulton.

Success to the GAZETTE. XX.

—E. Olle, Richard Ahmes and Will Bruner of Freyburg, Fayette county, passed through here last week on their way to Gollad county on a prospecting trip.

—E. C. Kauffmann and August Warnken, brother of Fritz Warnken of this place, stopped over in Shiner last week, while on their way to Yoakum and Cuero.
